DES MOINES OFFICE

Having a strong work ethic and doing quality work have been a way of life for Stephanie Marett since she was a child. "My parents both worked hard and had high expectations for themselves no matter the circumstances," she says. "They instilled in me those same values, which I applied to school, sports, music and work."

Stephanie specializes in workers' compensation claims, defending businesses in litigated and non-litigated cases. "I find the medical issues of workers' compensation cases particularly engaging and enjoy working with medical professionals," she says.

Stephanie strives to address issues proactively with clients, advising them on how to approach matters to avoid claims in the first place. She views her client relationships, which can span many years, as her biggest inspiration at work. "My clients are the best part of my job and make my work more meaningful and enjoyable."

A competitive litigator, Stephanie is also effective in appellate settings. Because of the number of appeals in workers' compensation cases, Stephanie brings vast experience to the appellate process and is a polished writer of appeal briefs. "During my judicial clerkship, I reviewed many briefs and learned what is and is not effective," she says. "I am able to present evidence in an efficient and easy-to-understand manner."

She also defends bad faith cases. Many of those cases have an underlying workers' compensation element, and that interconnection gives her an advantage. "My knowledge of workers' compensation issues, statutes, and procedures provides me with an advantage in handling the complex issues that arise in bad faith cases throughout the litigation process." In addition, Stephanie handles personal liability and tort defense, insurance coverage and conduct, and business and commercial litigation.

Following her parents' example, Stephanie's professional and life philosophy is simple: work hard, be prepared, and always do your best. "Achieving a goal, especially one that involves a significant financial obligation like paying my way through law school, is more satisfying and rewarding when it is reached through your own hard work and dedication," she says.

A college semester abroad in Malta gave her insight that she continues to apply in her law practice. "It helped broaden my perspective of the world, gave me real-life problem-solving skills, and provided the opportunity to learn and work with people from very diverse backgrounds," Stephanie says. "This experience provided me with a better perspective in my practice because I work with employers from a wide variety of occupations that have a diverse work force."

SIGNIFICANT CASES

Paulino v. Chartis Claims, Inc.*, 774 F. 3d 1161 (8th Cir. 2014). Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals affirmed the District Court’s granting of summary judgment in Chartis’s favor and dismissing the case, finding Chartis acted in an objectively reasonable manner when it withdrew authorization for Paulino’s continued rehabilitation residence, thereby precluding a bad faith claim.

Dunlap v. Commerce and Industry Insurance Company*, LACL 114516 (Iowa Dist. Ct. August 2017). Iowa District Court for Polk County granted summary judgment, including one claim on a motion to reconsider, in Commerce and Industry’s favor and dismissed the case, finding Defendants did not act in bad faith with respect to the handling of Dunlap’s workers’ compensation claim.

Gonzalez v. Berry Plastics Corp.*, CVCV501443 (Iowa Dist. Ct. Dec. 13, 2017). On judicial review, the Iowa District Court for Franklin County affirmed the Iowa Workers’ Compensation Commissioner’s appeal decision that held Gonzalez failed to carry her burden of proof that her stipulated work injury resulted in CRPS and/or a mental injury rather than a temporary scheduled member injury.

Sandberg v. Rubbermaid Home Products*, 2008 WL 5234378 (Iowa Ct. App. Dec. 17, 2008). Appellate counsel for case wherein the Iowa Court of Appeals affirmed the district court’s reversal of the Iowa Workers’ Compensation Commissioner. The Iowa Court of Appeals held that chronic pain alone cannot serve as the basis for converting a scheduled member injury to a body as a whole injury.

Rogers v. Energy Panel Structures, et al.*, No. 07-458 (Iowa Ct. App. Aug. 8, 2007). The Iowa Court of Appeals affirmed the district court decision, which dismissed all breach of contract, warranty, and negligence claims against client EPS because the co-defendant dealer was not an agent of EPS.

Bowers v. Polk County Bd. of Supervisors*, No. 01-1636 (Iowa Supreme Ct. Jan. 7, 2002). Directly involved in amicus curiae brief addressing constitutional issues on behalf of the Greater Des Moines Partnership. The brief was filed in support of the district court’s judgment affirming the Polk County Board of Supervisors’ decision to authorize the issuance of essential county purpose bonds for the Iowa Event Center without holding a public referendum. The Iowa Supreme Court upheld the district court’s judgment.
