DES MOINES OFFICE

In his litigation practice, David Bower finds an intriguing professional challenge in discovering the right solutions for his clients' intricate legal problems. "I enjoy trying to find practical and creative solutions to complex problems," David says.

He applies that aptitude to a varied litigation practice that encompasses commercial litigation, products liability litigation, employment litigation, patent litigation, and general litigation. While the goal is always to find a satisfactory solution for his clients, David recognizes that sometimes that solution can only be provided by a jury and always prepares with that in mind. He has successfully tried many cases to verdict in both state and federal court. David has also briefed and argued numerous appeals before the Eighth Circuit Court of Appeals, the Iowa Supreme Court, and the Iowa Court of Appeals.

After earning a bachelor's degree in history and business/economics, David spent five years working in production management and exploring career options. He considered pursuing a graduate degree in history. Instead, in studying law, he found the intellectual challenge he desired.

David began his legal career as an associate in the Chicago office of an international law firm and then as a clerk for the Hon. Ronald E. Longstaff, U.S. District Court, Southern District of Iowa. There, David developed his approach to the practice of law. "I've been fortunate in that a lot of the things that I've been able to do since I graduated from law school have been in areas that I'm interested in and the type of work I like to do, and I've been lucky to have had tremendous mentors," David says.

Now in his Nyemaster practice, he continues to apply those qualities and good judgment to solve his clients' litigation problems. "A lot of my prior experience dealt with what I would call complex, challenging issues, he says, "and I think working on those types of issues fosters a depth of creative thinking and analysis."

Using that analysis, David crafts legal solutions that are easy for the courts and juries to understand and accept—creating successful arguments for his clients. "Within the bounds of reason and good faith, we're always creating narratives—factual narratives, but more importantly, narratives about how the law applies to the facts," David says. "I enjoy that part—creating the narrative about what the problem is and what we think the correct answer is."
