DES MOINES OFFICE

Real estate law unexpectedly captured Lindsey Guerrero’s imagination during law school. “My undergraduate major was Spanish. My intention was to practice immigration law or international law,” Lindsey says. “I accepted a summer associate position with a real estate firm after being intrigued by a property law course. I immediately fell in love with the transactional nature of real estate.” She thrives on meticulous detail and organization, two skills that are critical to the success of a real estate transaction. As a result, she pivoted her focus to real estate law and never looked back.

Lindsey represents lenders, developers, purchasers, and sellers in commercial real estate transactions. Her real estate practice primarily consists of of facilitating acquisitions, dispositions, development projects, and leasing matters. Her practice routinely involves examining abstracts, rendering title opinions, handling due diligence, and negotiating purchase agreements, leases, easements, and other title clearing instruments.

Lindsey finds real estate law invigorating because a distinct fact pattern never ceases to arise—always keeping things interesting.

As a former underwriting attorney and then director for Iowa’s exclusive title coverage provider, Iowa Title Guaranty, Lindsey gained a unique perspective on real estate transactions. Lindsey oversaw and provided guidance to more than 1,000 attorneys across Iowa on matters related to title clearing and settlement best practices. “Iowa Title Guaranty is a trusted resource for Iowa real estate professionals,” Lindsey says. “I had great exposure to a vast number of complex and nuanced title issues across the state of Iowa.”

“I am incredibly lucky to have had the opportunity to collaborate with, and learn from, Iowa’s most distinguished real estate professionals,” Lindsey says. Her experience at Iowa Title Guaranty also led to her passion for protecting Iowa’s pristine land title system and maintaining the lowest title-related claims rates in the country.

Thorough, responsive, empathic, and a clear communicator, Lindsey wants to get things done. Her parents, both entrepreneurs, nurtured her creative energy. From them, she learned to never settle for how it’s always been done. Instead, she looks for innovative ways to resolve issues. To advance that skill, Lindsey even earned a Certificate in Entrepreneurial Management.
